

- | | | | |
|---------------|-----------------|------------------|------------|
| 1. Generous | 4. Manipulative | 7. Compassionate | 10. Greedy |
| 2. Entitled | 5. Humble | 8. Arrogant | |
| 3. Supportive | 6. Selfish | 9. Selfless | |

Task: sort the words out and match the definitions

- a) always wanting more for themselves
- b) willing to give time, money, or help
- c) using others for personal gain
- d) deeply caring about others' suffering
- e) expecting special treatment without effort
- f) putting others' needs before their own
- g) believing they are better than others
- h) not seeking praise or recognition
- i) always ready to help and encourage others
- j) only interested in their own benefit

Describe the pictures using the adjectives above

Listen to four people and match the examples of advantages to each person.

Are these advantages of being an altruist or an egoist?

- 1. Boosts self-confidence – Prioritizing your needs can make you feel stronger and more in charge.
- 2. Promotes mutual support – Being kind can inspire others to help you when needed.
- 3. Helps achieve personal goals – Less distraction from others means more time to succeed.
- 4. Leads to emotional fulfillment – Helping others brings a sense of purpose and well-being.
- 5. Sets clear personal boundaries – You’re less likely to be used or overwhelmed by others.
- 6. Creates social harmony – Generous behavior reduces conflict and encourages cooperation.
- 7. Encourages independence – Focusing on yourself helps you grow and take control of your life.
- 8. Builds trust and strong relationships – People naturally connect with those who show care.

Malik, 38, Environmental Scientist

- 1. Why was Malik sad a few years ago?
- 2. Who is Aisha, and how does Malik support her?

Sofia, 29, Graphic Designer

- 1. Why did Sofia move out at 18?
- 2. What did she do after getting a job two years ago?

Elena, 45, Nurse

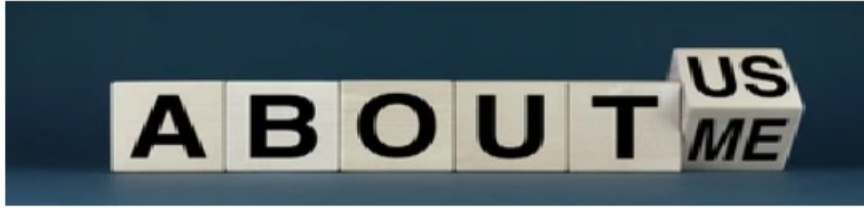

- 1. What inspired Elena to become a nurse?
- 2. What happened to her marriage?

Javier, 32, Real Estate Agent

- 1. Why did Javier refuse to work with his friend?
- 2. How does he keep his life free from problems?

- a. Which of the four people do you like or dislike the most? Why?
- b. Would you describe yourself more as an altruist or an egoist? Can you give an example?
- c. Do you see yourself more as an altruist or an egoist? What benefits do you personally see in living this way?

EGOISTIC ALTRUISM

Watch the video and choose the best answer (a or b) for each question.

- Before the Industrial Revolution, what limited economic growth?
 - Land size
 - Number of workers
- What was the world economy like before growth began?
 - A positive-sum game
 - A zero-sum game
- Why did societies often invade each other in the past?
 - To increase overall productivity
 - To get more resources
- What did the Industrial Revolution change most dramatically?
 - The nature of economic output
 - The climate of Europe
- What drives innovation according to the video?
 - Random chance
 - Supply and demand
- What happens as more people become wealthier?
 - The market for innovation shrinks
 - The demand for ideas grows
- How could curing cancer be accelerated, as suggested?
 - By increasing the number of wealthy people
 - By limiting access to research
- What is the main benefit of a positive-sum world?
 - Everyone can gain at the same time
 - One group must lose for another to win

Do you agree that making poor countries richer could actually benefit your own life? Why or why not? (Think about how innovation and global progress might affect your job, health, or interests.)

The video says we now live in a “positive-sum world.” In your opinion, what’s one innovation or idea you’d like more people to help develop — and how could that improve your life personally?

CONTROVERSIAL STATEMENTS

- No true altruism exists—people only help others to feel good about themselves.
- Parents have no right to be egoistic; their children must always come first.
- Altruists often get used by others and end up unhappy.
- Being egoistic is the only way to succeed in today’s competitive world.
- People naturally become more altruistic as they grow older.
- Helping strangers is a waste of time if it doesn’t benefit you.
- Egoists are more emotionally stable because they don’t rely on others.
- Society should reward altruistic behavior with tax breaks or public recognition.

