

Look at the images. What do they show?
Can you think of any reasons why these particular images have been grouped together?

1. What kind of coffee does Larry order?
2. Why does he get annoyed by the barista?
3. What is her excuse for speaking that way?
4. What word does Larry use to describe her voice and what does it mean?
5. How does Larry react when the girl calls him a total dick? Why?

Who do you side with in this episode?

- | | |
|---|--|
| <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. What is the scientific term used by linguists for vocal fry?
a) Phonation b) Creaky c) Scratchy 2. Which group is usually at the forefront of language change?
a) Professionals b) Linguists c) Youth 3. What happens to the vocal folds during this specific habit?
a) Close b) Open c) Vibrate | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 4. Which specific gender is most often judged for using it?
a) Men b) Women c) Both 5. How do people generally perceive this habit in the office?
a) Unfavorably b) Positively c) Naturally 6. Besides speech, what else do critics judge in workplaces?
a) Skill b) Age c) Appearance |
|---|--|

Do you think people judge others just by the way they talk? Is it okay to tell someone their voice is annoying?

Do you notice young people changing the language more than older people?

What matters more to you: the words someone uses or the way they sound?

An affectation is a fake way of acting or speaking that someone uses to try to impress others or seem more important than they really are.

Look at the examples of some other forms of affectation and match them to the explanations on the right:

1. Name-Dropping
2. Fishing for Compliments
3. Intellectual Posturing
4. Mirroring
5. Grooming Excellence
6. Altering Appearance
7. Altruism
8. Expressive Body Language
9. Over-Sharing

- A. Doing something kind in front of others so that they think you are a great person.
- B. Telling private or sad stories too soon to make a person feel a fast emotional bond.
- C. Making big changes to your body, like tattoos or hair color, to get a reaction.
- D. Saying negative things about yourself so that other people give you a nice compliment.
- E. Talking about famous or important people you know so that you look more successful.
- F. Copying someone's movements or way of speaking to make them feel closer to you.
- G. Using very difficult words or rare topics to make everyone think you are the smartest.
- H. Keeping your clothes, hair, and style perfect to show people that you are important.
- I. Moving your hands and body in a very strong way to control the attention of the room.

Listen to four speakers and match them to the examples of affectations from the previous task.

Why don't they like it when people do these things? What affectations are they guilty of themselves?

What affectations do you personally find to be annoying? Are you guilty of any affectations yourself?