

READING

WRITING

IDIOMS

VOCABULARY

GRAMMAR

SPELLING

PRONUNCIATION

COLLOCATIONS

SPEAKING

HUMOR

LISTENING

PHRASAL VERBS

Which of the following aspects of English do you find the most difficult?

Listen to Arjun talking about learning a language and say which four things he had difficulty with.

Because VS That's why

- introduces the result or the logical conclusion following a fact.
- introduces the specific reason or cause.

So VS Such

- modifies an adjective or adverb to add emphasis.
- modifies a noun or a noun phrase.

If VS When

- is used for a certain event that is definitely expected to happen.
- is used for a condition or possibility that might not happen.

Than VS Then

- is used only for making comparisons between things.
- is used to indicate a sequence of time or a result.

For vs. Since

- is used to show a duration or a total period of time.
- is used to point to a specific moment when an action started.

During vs. While

- is a conjunction followed by a subject and a verb.
- is a preposition followed by a noun.

Ago VS Before

- is used to relate one past event to another past event or point in time.
- counts back from "now" to a point in the past.

Some VS Any

- is used for negative statements or when asking questions.
- is generally used for positive, affirmative statements.

Few VS Little

- is used with plural countable nouns (friends, books).
- is used with uncountable nouns (time, money, water).

Other VS Another

- means "one more" or an alternative single item.
- refers to the remaining items in a group or different types of things.

Many VS Much

- is used with uncountable nouns (work, effort).
- is used with plural countable nouns (staff members).

Do VS Make

- is used for creating, producing, or constructing something new.
- is typically used for jobs, tasks, or repetitive activities.

★ ☕ The Coffee Break Secret ☕ ★

Roman and Julia first met exactly six months ago/before at the stressful company Christmas party. At the time, Roman was so/such nervous that he spilled his drink on Julia's white desk.

Because/That's why he felt terrible, he offered to buy her lunch the next day. If/When he asked her out, he didn't expect her to say yes, but she did.

Since that day, their relationship has grown. However, they decided to keep it a secret while/during work hours.

It is much harder then/than they imagined. For/Since last January, they have only spoken in the breakroom or via private emails.

One afternoon, Julia was working on a design. She realized she had few/little time left before the deadline.

"I need you to do/make a choice," Roman whispered, walking past her desk. "Italian or Thai food tonight?"

"I can't think about another/other meal right now, Roman! I have too much/many work," Julia replied, looking at her screen.

"I managed to get any/some extra tickets for that concert tonight," Roman said hopefully. "I bought them two weeks ago/before."

Julia sighed. "Because/That's why I have this deadline, I might have to stay late."

"If/When you finish early, call me," Roman said with a smile. "I'll wait for you."

Suddenly, their manager, Mr. Henderson, walked in. The couple stood apart.

"Roman, did you do/make the report for the catering?" Mr. Henderson asked.

"I'm working on it now, sir," Roman answered quickly.

Julia watched Roman leave the room. She knew she had worked at the company longer than/then he had, but he was definitely better at keeping a straight face.

She smiled to herself. It was so/such a strange situation, but she wouldn't change it for anything.

